Certificate in Sustainable Real Estate Development
Application Form

Students in the Tulane School of Architecture Master’s and Preservation Studies programs may obtain a Certificate in Sustainable Real Estate Development (CSRED) during the course of their studies in addition to their professional degree.

The SRED Certificate program starts with an intensive summer semester: four courses over five weeks, starting in early July through the first week of August. Students join the incoming class of the Master of Sustainable Real Estate Development for these introductory courses. This summer session ends with a week-long Field Study trip, usually to Washington, DC and Philadelphia.

Following the summer semester, SRED Certificate students must take the Real Estate Finance course offered during the fall and spring semesters in partnership with the Freeman Business School in order to complete the requirements.

Applications to the SRED Certificate Program must be received by the MSRED program Director by the second semester of third year.

Student Name:

Email address:

Tulane Student ID:

Type of program currently enrolled in: ____________________________

Briefly state why you are interested in pursuing this Certificate program: